"PRINCIPIA NON HOMINES."

We have copied into the Gazette, to day, an article from the National Intelligencer, "a paper printed at" Washington city, filled with "spleenetic effusions," against us. It appears that Messrs. Gales and Seaton have taken it into high dudgeon, because we styled their's the "Court Paper." Now we declare it was not our intention to give offence.—We thought, and so do nine-tenths of the community, that the Editors of the Intelligencer plumed themselves upon the occupancy of what, in England, would be called the ministerial print. And why did we think so? Because there has not been a single cabinet act for twelve years, or more, nor a solitary cabinet sentiment, but what has met the prompt & decided approbation of their paper. With regard to congress, the editors mould their views to suit the president and his prime minister.

About the meeting of Mr. CLAY and the president at Harrodsburg, it is a matter of no very great concernment to the nation. We only mentioned, at a former time, the circumstance to shew that no hostility rankled in the bosoms of either of these gentlemen towards the other. But the Intelligencer wishes to hold out the idea that Mr. MONROE was constrained to friendly intercourse, because he could not repulse the civilities of Mr. CLAY. We just take occasion here to remark, that if any individual or individuals whatever, have represented to the Intelligencer, that Mr. CLAY's attentions were officiously obtruded, they have made an entire mistake—it would not do to say wilful misrepresentation. We pretty much expect that the advances came from the other quarter. However, be this as it may, Mr. CLAY is "too well bred a man" to importune the society of another, whose strongest claim to equality consists in elevation of office.

The Intelligencer has taken occasion to say that principia non homines, was the motto of the president. Why the necessity of this assertion? No one has ever charged him with being governed exclusively by men, and not at all by principle. Such a sweeping charge would amount to an outrage upon the common understanding of society. But it would be well for the official paper to remember that the executive feeling must be a little tender on this subject.

As to the "sparkling wit" of the Intelligencer, concerning a "baker's dozen" who, in Lexington, withheld attentions from the president, if allusion is made to any persons who are known to the political circles here, it need just be remarked that the statement is foul and false, no matter who the authority—and the motive which induced it, mean and contemptible.

From the National Intelligencer, of September 4.

The Kentucky Gazette, (printed at Lexington), which seems of late to have sought to distinguish itself by spleenetic effusions, addressed, not so much to us as to the President of the United States, has furnished some remarks on the subject of the late visit of the President to Kentucky. We are not deterred, by the ill-nature of its remarks and allusions, from copying the article referred to, which will be found in the preceding column.

Of the facts related respecting Mr. CLAY, we have no reason to doubt the correctness. He is too well bred a man to omit any proper occasion of paying respect to the President of the United States, when called by public duty into his vicinity; and the President could not have been expected to repulse his civilities when tendered. It is very well, if any misapprehension existed on this subject, that it should be cleared up.

With respect to some other parts of the remarks of the Gazette, perhaps the least said is soonest mended. It is certain, or we are much misinformed, that the "generous conduct" of the good people of Lexington to the President, was not wholly without exceptions, the more remarkable from the paucity of their numbers, perhaps altogether not amounting to a baker's dozen. These persons, of course, were not amongst "the warmest friends of Mr. CLAY."

We will only add, that it is to be feared, such publications as those in the Gazette are calculated to answer any purpose but that of allaying political jealousies. There exists no where, we are persuaded, a wish "to place every prominent politician in hostile array to the administration." The time is arrived, if ever it can arrive in any community, when men are to be judged by their actions, and not by their associations.—"Principia non homines"—principles, not men—is said to be the motto of our excellent President. It is the rule of action of a much larger portion of our fellow-citizens than is generally believed. It is thus "Mr. CLAY and Mr. CRAWFORD" are to be judged; and they have no reason to fear injustice at the hands of their country. Of the character of Mr. CRAWFORD we have had occasion, more than once, to express our high opinion; and we wish it now to be understood that, whatever "enemies" Mr. CLAY may have, we are not of the number.

The latter remark would not have been thought necessary, had not the Kentucky Gazette, in a different part of the same day's paper, thought fit to borrow the sparkling wit of the Aurora, in referring to this as "the Court Paper," and therefore one of the papers to which its preceding remarks are applicable.

OHIO vs. THE UNITED STATES.

It will be recollected, that last winter the state of Ohio passed a similar law, to that which our state enacted, imposing a tax on the branches of the United States bank, of 60,000 dollars. The operation of the Kentucky statute was suspended by an injunction granted by the federal circuit court at this place, in February last. Shortly afterwards, the decision of the supreme court of the U. States, in the case of McCulloch vs. The State of Maryland, put at rest the question, by denying that any state could impose a tax on the branches of the mother bank.

It seems, however, that the state of Ohio has not been willing to submit to the opinion of the highest judicial tribunal in the nation. Last week, under a warrant from the Auditor, the civil authority entered and occupied the branch of the United States Bank at Chillicothe, and took from its vaults upwards of $120,000, the whole amount of the tax and costs due from both branches of that state—deposited it in another bank of the town, for the day—and on the succeeding day, wagoned the money to Columbus. These facts were officially received on Wednesday night.

It is certainly abhorrent to the feelings of every reflecting mind, that the national law, as declared by the supreme court, should be thus disregarded—and we know not what consequences the act may invite.

YELLOW FEVER.

Our Natchez dates are up to the 7th inst. We are sorry to observe that the yellow fever has again made its appearance in that city. Several cases of a fatal nature had occurred, and many existed, the result of which was doubtful. The inhabitants were in a great state of alarm, and most of them had temporarily removed to the country.

In our last Southern papers nothing whatever is said concerning the occupation of Pensacola by a British force. It is presumed there is no foundation for the report that has been in circulation for some days past.

A second number of "ARISTIDES" on the propriety of a property law, will appear next week. We hope the utmost attention will be given by our readers to his sentiments.

FOR THE KENTUCKY GAZETTE.

UNITED STATES BANK.

NO. II.

TO THE HON. LANGDON CHEVES.

SIR—I last week addressed a letter to Mr. CALHOUN, through the medium of the Gazette, on the subject of the institution over which you have been placed to preside, by the constituted authority of the government, for that purpose.—Should that paper be so fortunate as to meet your eye, you will have remarked that the lapse of time has required me to change my opinion on the subject of the policy of the United States Bank, an establishment which, I frankly declare, I once thought indispensable to the monied affairs of the Republic. I do not often suffer convictions to become deeply rooted in my mind, & then declare them to the world, without the most solemn deliberation. On the present subject, I have given the utmost consideration, which has been aided by observation, and a little experience in banking operations:—and I am free to aver, that I believe the liberties and happiness of this people demand some interposition, so as to check the monstrous strides to aristocratic monopoly, which this great monied corporation is daily making. The people of England justly complain of their miserable borough-mongering system of representation in parliament. The right of suffrage there, is a mere nominal thing—whose mutations accommodate themselves to gold & silver, pensions and places. The great mass of the subjects of the kingdom are deprived of the sacred enjoyment of their rights. But I am disposed to think that the Bank of the United States, ramified as it is through almost every state in the Union, will ere long become more ratiten and corrupt—and lead to consequences more dangerous in America—than Great Britain has ever yet witnessed from her Borough-mongers, wielded as they have been by her Liverpools—her Sidmouths—and her Castlereachs.

The mal-practices that occur in the mother bank are within your sphere of observation, and are made with the authority of your sanction. I had hoped when you received your present appointment, you would endeavor to fulfil the high expectations your country once entertained concerning your political worth. I mean the first year or two you represented, in part, South Carolina in congress. You afterwards chilled the blood that ran through the veins of your best friends: You unblushingly apostatized your political tenets: You became what, in common parlance, is called a quid: You literally became a trimmer between the two great parties. The republicans did not like to give you up—and the federalists, or rather Tories, kept you in close hug. In this situation you were conducted to the presidency of one of the most vitiated monopolies in the Universe. How manly! How virtuous it would have been, in you, to have shewn that banks could be conducted on high and honorable principles. But, instead of that, you suffer yourself to be the High Priest and patron of unprincipled swindlers, and of a digested system of degenerate swindling.

Depravity of banking is not confined to Philadelphia—not confined to the mammoth monster of that city. But of this you need not be informed. You know that corruption exists in every branch in the Union: but you have not the patriotic firmness to acknowledge it officially—and to retire, in disgust, from the desperate station you now occupy. You have deputy presidents, rioting in all the splendid paraphernalia of superabundant wealth, who are opening the bowels of the earth, and issuing to the world its metallic stores; and whose apparent opulence is designed to aid in embellishing the proud Mississippi. Yet scrutinize the matter—examine where the funds come from for these purposes, and you will discover that some of your petty presidents are perfectly insolvent, and that the active capital they have employed has been drawn from the vaults of the bank, without any other security than the names of endorsers who are as deep in the mud, as the principals are in the mire. Are proceedings like these correct? Are they compatible with the interests of the government or of the people?

Other classes of bank gentlemen occasionally receive the moderate accommodations of 3 and 4 thousand dollars, without having a cent's worth of property upon which to base a request for a loan. Would you believe that one cashier could get a sum of this amount from bank, with the mere endorsement of another, when if the properties of both men were collected together, and vendued at auction, their sale would not command money enough to pay one discount? Do not startle. I am not ignorant of the minutia of many transactions of a similar character. Even directors, when they sit in "dark divans," do not succeed in as much mystery as their dignified approach to the house of infamy induce many to believe. Evil deeds may be concealed for a while; but that stern and inflexible agent, TIME, will unravel them. Sin and iniquity will out sooner or later.

Setting aside the easy access of the officers of the bank to its coffers, how very easy is it for Directors, who are not punctilious as it regards principle, to cause their immediate friends to obtain loans, to the entire exclusion of honest and substantial men. In the lesser towns in the American community, you will know a variety of circumstances often combine to create party spirit. When, therefore, a majority of a directory are of particular tenets, and possess other asperities, how reasonable is it to expect they will indulge feeling in measuring out their power? It is not difficult to suppose a case of this kind—for you have appointed, with proper lights before your eyes, to one of the branch directories of this state a majority of men whom I would class among this description.

I spoke last week of new rules which were sometimes made to suit convenient bank purposes. This was not a chimera. In June or July last a rule was made here to require endorsers to become principals, and make their notes payable to "the President, Directors and Company of the Bank of the United States!" I had thought this rule had tacked to it some kind of qualification; but it seems I was mistaken—Because, since I commenced writing this letter, a gentleman of as high standing as any in Kentucky, and who had not been a defaulter, had a requisition made upon him to comply with the order of the board on this subject. Is not such a step an infringement upon all banking regulations? Is it not an outrage upon society? And were you not the person who projected it?

EPAMINONDAS.

FOR THE KENTUCKY GAZETTE.

The Western Monitor of the 14th inst. contains a number of questions propounded by "An Enquirer," relating to Transylvania University.

The Editor of that paper states, that those queries were handed him for publication by gentlemen "who felt themselves aggrieved by the manner in which the old trustees of our University, and the whole Presbyterian denomination, have been recently attacked in the public papers."

With the Editor of the Monitor, I have nothing to do. His former remarks on Aristides, and Philo Aristides, (whom he erroneously believes are the same person) were not seen, for some length of time after they made their appearance; and had they been read, a response would not have been given. I have neither the time, nor the ambition to seek a contest with the Editor of a newspaper. The talent for petty newspaper thrusting and criticism, is one which I do not possess, and indeed is not deemed enviable; and I beg pardon of the Editor of the Monitor even for this slight personal allusion.

The sentiments of Aristides, with regard to the Presbyterian denomination, were prompted by the most lively indignation, at a dark and assassin-like attack, upon an institution of learning, which every good citizen should protect and vindicate. The falsehoods and slanders in the Chillicothe Weekly Recorder, which it is but too certain, flowed from the malevolence of a Presbyterian minister, were calculated to cloud the growing hopes of an establishment, which is as important to the pecuniary interests of the town of Lexington, as it is endeared to the lovers of education and of literature. It was distinctly stated, that I took no part with Mr. HOLLEY, as an individual. With pleasure it is perceived, that an unanimous opinion prevails, as to the writer in the Chillicothe Recorder. It is therefore deemed an useless consumption of time, to attempt to prove by an array of circumstances, that the production spoken of was an insidious and a base attack upon Transylvania University itself, and that Mr. HOLLEY's name was only used as a decoy by which the boldness of the assault might be concealed. Upon that part of the subject, Aristides and the Presbyterians will not quarrel.

I should the more willingly have presented myself again before the public, in answer to those aggrieved gentlemen whose sentiments are conveyed by "An Enquirer," if they had disclaimed all connection with the writer in the Chillicothe Recorder, and had denounced him as a liar and a calumniator.

The only point of issue between those aggrieved gentlemen whose queries are proposed by "An Enquirer," seems to be the manner in which Transylvania University was conducted while under the management of Presbyterians, and the supposed attempt to insult and denounce a numerous and respectable religious denomination. The profound scheme devised and prosecuted, towards the monopoly of the professorships in the schools and universities of the United States, is not denied. It is not a subject of complaint against the sect alluded to, that their talents and ambition aspire to that object. The love of ascendancy and domination is an inherent and powerful principle of action; and to censure those who possess and cherish it, would be railing the works of God. It is one of those stimulants which awaken enterprise and arouse genius. But while its emperate exercise redounds to purposes of utility and greatness, it is never more to be deplored and deprecated, than when it takes hold on the bosoms of a bigoted and intolerant religious sect. It is a common historic saying, that religious rulers make the most ruthless tyrants. It is contrary to the genius of that freedom, which is alike our boast and happiness, that one religious party should hold the sceptre of power. Whenever, therefore, I see such a disposition or tendency, I shall feel it my duty to give the alarm, and throw my feeble opposition against those who assail the sacred ramparts of religious toleration.

The writer signed "Enquirer," attributes the procurement of Transylvania University, its endowment, and its present consequence and growth, to the Presbyterians. The Presbyterians seem to claim it as their offspring; and as the prejudiced parent still hopes that his sickly and stupid brat will unfold the man of greatness—so they have the temerity to assert, that before "the war," Transylvania University was as flourishing and the number of students as great as could have been expected when the internal policy and practical wisdom of the college are taken into view." To ascribe the declension of the University to the war, is of a piece with the sentiments of its president during that period. Amid the almost unanimous shouts of joy in Lexington and the University, at the declaration of war, that president would have dampened the ardent patriotism of the youth, by tramping under the paper announcing that intelligence; by declaiming from the pulpit its injustice, and by predicting the curse of Heaven upon its prosecution.

It is a well known fact, that during the war commerce flourished and money abounded. The means of education were greater then than at almost any previous or subsequent period. The decline of the college cannot therefore be attributed to that cause. The Legislature were actuated by the true reasons of its depreciation, when they purged its government. When its neglect and mismanagement became the public topic, its trustees, like threatened slaves, hurried to work and commenced the splendid building of which they boast.

The minute account which seems to have been kept of the services of the Presbyterians in originating and nourishing the institution, illustrates what was asserted in the former number, that they claimed it as their right, and relinquished its walls with reluctance and sorrow.

It is improper in the general, to arraign a whole sect or body of men, for the errors of a part, and perhaps a small portion of the number. It is a mistaken impression, and a false assertion, that Aristides insulted and denounced a numerous denomination of Christians. A writer who hopes or expects that his reflections will meet with patient attention, would not be so foolish, as to prejudice the feelings of his readers, by a broad and unqualified reprobation, even of a corrupt class of men. One consideration alone would forbid such a course. The impressions of childhood and parental bias, have often bent the soundest judgment and most sublime genius, to the propagation of the most absurd doctrines. The sect with which we commune, and the altar at which we kneel, is more the result of habit and education, than the influence of sound argument, or the conviction of deliberate reason. It would therefore be unjust, even upon this ground to censure that which is the effect of accident. But it is my firm conviction, that one religion is as good as another, provided its devotees are sincere, and its precepts and practice comport with sound morality. Many of the Presbyterians are my acquaintances & friends. I can pledge myself for the sincerity of their piety, and the purity of their virtue. The leaders of that sect, are the promoters of this insidious, ungenerous and intolerant warfare with Mr. HOLLEY and Transylvania University.—The subordinate brethren are harmless and innocent, unless they catch the zeal of some rancorous denunciation or calumny. They then merely echo the tones of those, who have more craft and understanding, but less honesty and sincere christianity.

The propriety of fixing upon the Presbyterian sect, the censure, of attempting to injure Transylvania University thro' Mr. HOLLEY, will be found in the following statement of facts:

When Mr. HOLLEY first delivered his religious tenets from the pulpit in this place, some ministers were willing to receive him as a brother christian; and his principles were tolerated by all, except the Presbyterian sect, who fell back from the multitude, and exclaimed in the language of their oracle and high priest from New York, "God deliver us from such an unholy communion!" When all was joy at the prospect of re-animating an institution of learning which had been for years in a lingering consumption, that sect alone refused to participate in the event. They were mute, while the current of pleasure and approbation was running high; but as soon as the excitement began to abate, that never sleeping sect began to move, and whisper the sounds of objection.—When their impatient zeal and inward hatred thought that the world was prepared for the boldest opinions, they could utter, they began to deal in unceasing censure of Mr. HOLLEY—they have watched and detected his smallest foibles—and to cap the climax of their impudent temerity, ushered forth that base production in the Chillicothe Weekly Recorder. Need I detail the evidences of this dislike? They float in conversation—they lurk in pulpit oratory and declamation, and are to be heard amid the sanctified effusions of prayer.

The Presbyterian ministers were alone too rigid to attend Mr. HOLLEY's discourses at the chapel. Although he is universally admitted to be the scholar and the gentleman, they fly his company and avoid his circles. They refuse, with a few exceptions, to entrust their children to his tuition.

It must be known that Mr. HOLLEY is the choice of the trustees and of the people at large. The trustees are men, high in standing and popularity, and reflect the wishes of the country. Among a people who boast of religious freedom, one sectarian has no claims superior to another, unless he is clothed in the engaging robes of literature and science. Indeed if any faith is to be preferred, it is that of universal catholicism; that religious party who open the arms of charity and love, to all classes, whether Jew, Mahometan, or Christian.

Must it not be known to the slanderers of Mr. HOLLEY, that they will injure the college? The professors and tutors of an institution give it character and celebrity. If, therefore, the president of Transylvania University and its tutors are traduced, has it not the tendency of traducing the institution itself. Those who indulge in such practices, are aware of the consequences, and no doubt delight in the effect.

SLANDER SUIT.

The following interesting trial for Slander will shew how very dangerous it is for gentlemen of the faculty to take liberties with each other's character.

COURT OF KING'S-BENCH,

SATURDAY, MAY 29.

Morris vs. Mackinnon, M. D.

This was an action brought for slander. Mr. Bingham opened the pleadings. The declaration stated that the plaintiff being employed in business of an apothecary and accoucheur, and having for many years borne the character of a person well skilled and qualified for such business, and having carried on the same with great profit and advantage; the defendant, contriving and intending to injure him, had wilfully, maliciously, and without any probable cause, uttered the following slanderous words concerning the attendance of the plaintiff on the child of a Mrs. Bolter, namely—"your babe has been destroyed by calomel: the palate of the mouth, the bones of the head, and the root of the tongue, have been entirely destroyed by mercury," &c. by reason of which slander the plaintiff was greatly injured in his profession, his former patients having ceased to employ him. The defendant pleaded the general issue—not guilty. The damages were laid at £5,000.

Mr. Scarlett stated the plaintiff's case, and pointed out to the jury the nature of the serious injury of which his client had to complain. Preservation of character was of the highest importance to every professional man, but more particularly to a medical man, whose existence depended solely upon the good opinion entertained of him by society. The plaintiff had to complain of the most serious injury that could befall a man in his station of life—namely, the total destruction of his professional character, by the slander uttered by the defendant. Mr. Morris, the plaintiff, who resided in Chandos-street, Covent-garden, had for many years carried on the business of an apothecary and man-midwife, with great reputation to himself and advantage to the public. He had a numerous connexion, and was considered a man of great respectability. The defendant who resided in the Adelphi, was a gentleman of the same profession, though in a different branch, and was a man likewise of character and respectability—he was a doctor of medicine. It happened that the plaintiff had been called in to attend the family of a tradesman named Defoe, some of whose children were in a state of ill health. One of them had died, and another being in a dying state, Dr. Mackinnon was desired by the parent to give his advice: which he did, but on that occasion he used language with respect to the plaintiff, which reflected in an unbecoming manner upon his professional skill, and was calculated to do him irreparable injury. The case, however, of the plaintiff rested more particularly upon the slander uttered by the defendant concerning him to Mrs. Bolter, the person named in the declaration.—About the same time that the plaintiff attended the family at Mr. Defoe's, he was called in to minister to the sick child of Mrs. Bolter. The child had been afflicted with the measles, and becoming dangerously ill, the plaintiff was sent for; and he gave it such medicines as in his judgment seemed best adapted to remove the disorder. The child, however, got worse, and the mother having procured a ticket to the Western Dispensary, to which the defendant was physician, the latter attended the infant; and upon inquiring who had previously prescribed for the child, and what medicines it had received, he was informed that the plaintiff had attended, and had prescribed powders, some of which were shewn to the defendant; upon which he uttered highly offensive language concerning the plaintiff, and said that the medicine given was poison. On a subsequent occasion, when the child died, he uttered the words stated in the declaration. Such was the nature of the slander of which the plaintiff had to complain—slander which was destructive not only to his reputation, but blighted all his future hopes of existence. If the case was made out in evidence, no damages that the jury could give would more than compensate the plaintiff for so serious an injury.

James Defoe, a master carpenter, residing in Hungerford market, stated that in June 1817, Mr. Morris attended a sick child of his. The child died; and another of his children being affected with the same disease immediately after, he sent for Dr. Mackinnon, for his advice. As soon as the latter had seen the child, he said he wished witness had sent for him sooner, but assigned no reason then for the observation. Afterwards, when the second child died, he said, that if he had been sent for in the first instance he would have saved both children, or he would have forfeited his existence; but Mr. Morris knew no more of the inside of a man than he did of the inside of the moon. The defendant had attended the second child two days before it died, and in that interval had seen it six or seven times. Witness had known Mr. Morris sixteen or seventeen years, and had employed him before. He had previously lost two children, under the care of the latter.—He had lost a fifth child under the care of Dr. Mackinnon himself, but it was not afflicted with the same disease as the others. Witness had ceased to employ the plaintiff in his family, not solely in consequence of what the defendant had said, but also on account of having lost four children under the care of the for-

Mr. Sidney Jones, shopman to the plaintiff, remembered making up some medicines for Mrs. Bolter's child, which the plaintiff had attended. After the child died, he remembered a conversation between the plaintiff and the defendant, the subject of which was a coroner's inquest, which was about to be held on the body of the child. In that conversation the defendant offered to write a letter to the coroner, assuring him that there was not the slightest ground of imputation upon Mr. Morris's medical skill—and that the medicines given to the child were proper for its disease. Such a letter was afterwards sent by the beadle of the parish to the coroner. In fact, the plaintiff had told the witness that the defendant had attended the inquest, and had assured them that there was not the slightest ground for impeaching the plaintiff's practice.

The witness was then asked whether the plaintiff's practice had not been very considerable? This question was put, with a view to shew the general injury which the plaintiff must sustain from the slander of the defendant—but the counsel of the latter objected to the question, contending, on the authority of a note in the 1st vol. of Mr. Sergeant Williams's edition of Mr. Saunders's Report, p. 243, that no evidence could be given of any damages, unless it be specially stated in the declaration. As, in an action by a victualler for calling his wife a w—e, by which it was averred that several persons had left the house, this was not stating the special damages.

The Lord Chief Justice agreed that it was the general rule and that it was founded on reason—for the special damages ought to be stated in the declaration, in order that the defendant might have an opportunity of meeting it. It was not competent therefore to adduce evidence of general damage, while the declaration mentioned the names of only two individuals who had left the plaintiff.

Elizabeth Bolter states that her husband was a barge-builder, residing at Hungerford-stairs. In July last Mr. Morris attended her in her living-in, and she was perfectly satisfied with his conduct. In the month of December following, she had a child taken ill of the measles. No medical person then attended, but shortly afterwards, the child having a sore throat and mouth, she sent for Mr. Morris, who attended it from the 6th to the 12th of Dec. She had some powders of him; the child got worse and worse, and she requested him to attend every day. He told her, however, that there was no danger—but not being satisfied with him, she made interest to get a letter to the Dispensary, and in consequence of that Dr. Mackinnon came. He came up stairs swearing at the darkness of the staircase. When he got to the bed side, he showed the child his watch, in order to ascertain whether it could see. He then took some barley water in a spoon, and gave it to the child. He then asked who attended the child, and witness told him it was Dr. Morris. The defendant asked whether it was Dr. Morris of Parliament-street? She replied, "No, it was Dr. Morris of Chandos-street." Upon which he said, "Doctor be d—d; he is only an apothecary." Witness then shewed him some of the powders the child had been taking—and the defendant said it was all poison, and that her child was entirely destroyed with calomel—Witness asked him what calomel was, and he said it was mercury, and that mercury had destroyed her child—that if he had destroyed the bones of the head, the palate and the root of the tongue, and that he could have saved the child if he had been sent for sooner. He added, "Go where I will, it is the general cry; he (meaning the plaintiff) serves their children all alike. He has murdered your child." The child died next day about one o'clock, and when the defendant called, he looked at it, and taking hold of one of its hands, said, "It is a beautiful child—I never saw a finer child in my life; d—n his blood, he (the plaintiff) has willfully murdered it with mercury." He told her that if Mr. Morris sent in his bill, she was not to pay it, for he had been speaking to some of the faculty, and was ready to come forward, and make oath before a court and jury, that the child had been murdered. He said he would see her righted, and desired that he should have the plaintiff's bill when it was delivered, adding that he would attend her or her husband, at any hour of the day or night, or any of her family, if he was sent for. Her nurse was present at one of these conversations, her husband at another; and a fellow-lodger at a third.—Witness not being satisfied, desired the coroner's inquest to be held on the body of her child, and demanded justice.—She had told several people that Dr. Mackinnon had said her child was murdered. The day the coroner's inquest was to be held, the defendant sent for her down stairs. He had said he would not come in, because there should be no one present but themselves. He said, "what are you going to do at the Globe?" (the public house where the coroner was to sit.)—What is all this work about? Witness said it was about what he told her, namely, that her child had been murdered. He rejoined, "It will do you no good: the child is dead, and cannot be restored. This is what I get by attending poor people's children." Witness had never employed the plaintiff since.

Hannah Law, a fellow lodger of the last witness; Mary Ann Robinson, her nurse; and Richard Bolter, her husband, who had been present at different parts of these conversations, corroborated her statement in every particular.

Mr. Honoratus G. Thomas, a surgeon, formerly in partnership with Mr. Cruikshanks, was called to prove that he had examined the child after its decease, and that its death was produced by a different cause from that assigned by the defendant; but

The learned judge said there was no occasion to receive such evidence. The plaintiff, alleged that the words were falsely spoken and the defendant by his plea did not say that they were true.

The case of the plaintiff being closed, Mr. Gurney (with whom was Mr. Denman) addressed the jury on behalf of the defendant. He admitted, with his learned friend Mr. Scarlett, that nothing was of more importance to a professional man than character. On the part of his client he was not instructed to suggest any thing that could in the slightest degree detract from the plaintiff's character. Both the plaintiff and defendant were respectable men in their stations in life. The jury could not fail to observe it was not pretended that on any occasion the defendant and plaintiff had had any quarrel or misunderstanding. Nothing of that kind was suggested. It was impossible, therefore, to impute any malicious motive to the defendant. Neither was it possible to ascribe any mercenary motives to his conduct, because both gentlemen were engaged in totally distinct branches of their profession; and besides, as the defendant had attended from the dispensary, he had not received any fees. The defendant had instructed him to declare that his words had been misunderstood and misrepresented; and the strongest proof of the truth of his statement was, the promptitude with which he stated to the coroner's jury that there really was no blame imputable to Mr. Morris. There was no proof that the plaintiff had sustained any damage in consequence of the slander; for there was no person who had ceased to employ him, except Mr. Deane and Mr. Bolter; and according to the evidence of the former, he had ceased to employ him solely in consequence of what the defendant had said. Considering therefore all the circumstances of the case, the smallest damages would be more than a full compensation for any injury which the plaintiff might have sustained.

The jury under the learned Judge's direction, who cautioned them against any feeling incompatible with discretion and moderation, found their verdict for the plaintiff—Damages 500l.

LONDON, JULY 16.

Serious riots at Liverpool.—We mention, in our paper of Wednesday, upon the authority of a private letter, that a riot had taken place in the above town on the preceding Monday. We are now enabled to lay before our readers the following particulars of the disgraceful transaction:

"Monday last being the anniversary of the passage of the Boyne by King William, the members of several Orange Societies in this town determined to celebrate the day by partaking of dinners at their respective club rooms. In the morning, they assembled accordingly, dressed for the occasion. The procession was attended by a band of music.—Every person in procession had a large silk sash across his shoulders—many carried ornamented poles, upon which were placed representations of saints and eminent men; another carried a triumphal arch with the inscription of 'Holiness to the Lord!'—four men carried the Ark of the Covenant—another the effigy of a lamb in representation of him who was slain—another bore the bible before him—and one held up to the public gaze a silver image of King William, during the passing of which, from the rear to the head of the procession, every Orangeman took of his hat. A number of them were dressed in leopard skins—others in white and orange colored garments—others in black robes, with knives on their heads—some displayed drawn swords, and a number of silk colors crowned the whole. After divine service, the procession formed again in church street; and, accompanied by a concourse of people, marched up Lord street, through Castle street, around the Town Hall, and down Dale street. The crowd at the bottom of the latter street was very great, among which were observed a great number of the lower order of Irishmen. As soon as the head of the procession reached the end of the street, a notorious character was heard to cry aloud, 'Now, my boys, it is the time to begin!' In a moment the procession was assailed with a shower of brick and other missiles, with which that part of the street abounded, and for which it was evidently selected as the best spot for commencing the attack. The leader of the mob then, followed by a numerous band, rushed among the members of the society, crying aloud to his companions, 'Now, my lads, we'll have more blood for supper!' and knocked down and then trampled on any one who opposed them. They attacked the standard-bearers, tore the colors to rags, and broke the staves. The fragments they used as weapons, with which they felled such of the members of the procession as unfortunately came in their way. The paraphernalia mentioned above, were either totally demolished or much injured. The procession was broke at the first assault; and most of the persons who composed it ran into shops, or made their retreat from the attack the best way they could. Happily, no lives fell a sacrifice to the savage fury of the mob. Many of the Orangemen were, however, seriously wounded, having been knocked down and then trampled on by their brutal assailants.—Others in endeavoring to save the emblematical symbols of the society from destruction, were frightfully bruised about the head. Several of the men who had been active in the riot were secured on the spot, and carried to Bridewell,—and more were apprehended by the police in the course of the afternoon. The Mayor, with his usual promptitude, took the precaution of having the military in readiness to act, in the event of an attempt being made to renew the riot by the men who had eluded the hand of justice.

"The town, during the whole afternoon, was in a state of agitation. Bridewell was surrounded by people; and Lord street, Church street, Whitechapel, Dale street, were crowded till a late hour; but not the least disposition was anywhere manifested. The current of public opinion, indeed, ran strongly in the opposite direction; for, a singularity in this riot, and which was not noticed by persons who had the greatest experience of the favorable feeling which the people generally bear towards men who are apprehended for rioting, the officers of the police were cheered as they conveyed the prisoners to Bridewell.

Yesterday, the prisoners, eight in number, all Irish laborers, were brought up for examination before the mayor.—The informations of the witnesses against them were read over, and their persons sworn to, as having been very active in the riot. Their defence was such as might have been anticipated. Most of them had never been near the scene of the disturbance! whilst others admitted that they had been among the crowd, but denied having taken any part in the riot! One of them, when a witness swore to have seen him particularly forward in the attack, looked at him with a most disaboli- countenance, and said, 'You had better mind what you are saying, for you don't know what you will bring upon you for it!' They were all remanded till the lives of the men who were wounded in the affray are declared out of danger.

"At the same time, a man was brought up, charged with having on Monday evening, stabbed another man in the thigh with a sword-stick. The wounded man was too ill to appear, and the prisoner was, therefore, remanded till he can attend. Whether or not the assault has arisen out of the events of the early part of the day, was not stated."

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Advices have been received from Port Jackson to the first week in October, when there was every prospect of an abundant harvest throughout the territory. The Glory, captain Poinder, the Isabella, captain Berry, and the Maria, captain Williams, with male and female convicts, had arrived on the 14th and 15th September.

The committee of the House of Commons are entering with much interest on an enquiry into the present state and capabilities of our settlements in this part of the world. A gentleman who has been many years in New South Wales and Van Dieman's Land, has been already examined several days. It appears, their wool promise to be of much moment to the colonists, and not to be unimportant to this country; some bales were sold in March at Garway's as high as 5s. 6d. per lb. Many manufacturers, we learn, prefer them to the Saxon wool, from their peculiarly elastic and silky quality. Already most of the necessities of life are less expensive in N. Holland than in Great Britain. The following fruits are growing in abundance and perfection: Oranges, citrons, lemons, grapes, Pomegranates, the olive, loquats, nectarines, apricots, peaches, apples, cherries, plums, medlars, mulberries, figs, walnuts, Spanish chestnuts, currants, gooseberries, strawberries, raspberries, melons, &c. The hop also promises to succeed to the utmost wishes of the planter; their barley being particularly fine, the colonists may be expected to produce a good malt liquor for their own consumption. From the luxuriance with which the grape bears they have equally the most promising expectation of drinking their own wines, and it is understood a distillery will be permitted in the territories; our antipodean brethren will shortly have the means of independently furnishing themselves with most of the comforts of life.—London paper.

We learn, by a gentleman from Gibraltar, that the intended expedition, which has been long preparing at great expense, at Cadiz, for South America, has been suspended, in consequence of the numerous desertions of the soldiers, dissatisfied with their provisions, and at not receiving their pay. Several officers had been arrested, had escaped from confinement, and reached Gibraltar.

This delay of the grand expedition, which has so long occupied the public attention, must cause a great sensation in Spain, and considerable rejoicing among the revolutionists in South America. What the effect will be, and what step will now be taken, remains to be known.

NATCHEZ SEPT. 7. TEXAS.

There are rumors of a messenger having gone to Galveston to engage in the service of the Patriots, the pirate Laffite. We hope and trust, for the honor of the cause, that they may be unfounded—for from the moment that such a measure was perfected, the expedition would change its character, and could not carry with it the approbation of the honest and virtuous part of the community. MONTREAL, SEPT. 1.

We have this day the painful task of announcing to our readers the unexpected death of our Governor in Chief, the DUKE OF RICHMOND. He died on Saturday last, the 28th ult. at 8 o'clock of the morning, after a few hours illness, as he was returning from his tour to Upper Canada, by the way of the new settlements and the Ottawa river. Yesterday morning, at an early hour, the body was brought to the government house in this city, and about 7 o'clock of the evening, was carried on board the steam boat Malsham, to be conveyed to Quebec. On this solemn occasion, the troops in garrison, with music, the officers of the different departments, the clergy, and citizens of every degree, attended his Grace's remains to the river side.

At the late Assizes, held at Niagara, Upper Canada, Robert Gourlay, well known for his political writings, was tried and convicted of a misdemeanor, and sentenced to be banished to the United States.—Balt. Post.

MOB AT PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, SEPT. 9.

Destruction of Vauxhall.—We have just returned from witnessing a scene disgraceful to the city of Philadelphia—a scene, the like of which never before occurred in this city, and which, we trust, never will again. In consequence of the advertisements of a Mr. Michel, the late partner of Mr. Guille, who a short time ago made a successful excursion in a balloon, from the city of N. York, an immense concourse of citizens, exceeding, at a moderate calculation, 30,000 in number, assembled at, and in the vicinity of Vauxhall Garden.—From want of skill, or design, (we know not which) the balloon was only partially inflated.

The citizens waited for three or four hours, with a patience not to have been anticipated. When it is considered that many of them had been disappointed in a similar manner, a few days before, and it is probable would have retired to their homes, without any violent expression of their disapprobation, had it not been for a most unfortunate and unjustifiable occurrence which took place about sundown. A boy had clambered up the fence of the gardens, when he was ordered down by a person in the inside; he refused, and gave the man some insolence, who struck him down with a piece of board or slab. It is said, with what truth we are unable to say, that the boy is since dead.

Some persons on the outside, already exasperated with disappointment, immediately commenced the work of destruction, by tearing down the fence of the garden. They then went deliberately to work, breaking the lamps, summer houses, windows of the temple, &c.—They broke into the bar-room, broke the bottles, glasses, &c. spilled and drank the wine, and other liquors. When they had destroyed all they conveniently could, they set fire to the temple, which being composed of wood, was entirely consumed, notwithstanding the active and unremitted exertions of our fire and hose companies. It is, of course, impossible, for us yet to state the probable amount of the loss sustained by the proprietor of the garden.

Under the circumstances of the case, the destruction of the balloon, although it could not have been justified, might have admitted of some palliation. But the wanton and illegal destruction of the property of an unoffending individual is an offence which cannot be tolerated in a government of laws. We trust the perpetrators will be discovered and punished.—Amer. Centinel.

A called term of the Fayette Circuit Court, for the trial of commonwealth's pleas, and chancery causes, will be held, to commence on Monday, the 25th day of October next, and continue for two weeks.

Married.

On Sunday morning at the Episcopal Church in this town, Mr. JOHN H. HANNA, of Frankfort, to Miss MARY S. HUNT, eldest daughter of John W. Hunt, esq.

On the same evening, Mr. JOSEPH BRUNER, to Miss MARGARETTA PARKER, both of this town.

In this town on Wednesday evening, by the Rev. Dr. Cloud, Mr. JAMES ARMSTRONG, editor of the Kentucky Advertiser, at Winchester, to Miss JANE PRICE RIGDELY, daughter of the Rev. John Price.

On the 16th inst. Mr. THOS. J. HAMILTON, to Miss MARTHA SANDERSON, both of this county.

FROM A LOUISVILLE PAPER.

A man, from appearance young, was found floating in the Ohio river about five miles below this town, on Wednesday evening last, with the following articles of clothing on, viz: A fine shirt, white cravat, fine flannel under shirt, blue cassimer trousers, not very fine, fine stockinet drawers, mixed cotton socks, shoes of an excellent quality, somewhat worn, and laced high above the ankle—no marks observed on any of the clothing. A pair of gold sleeve-buttons, marked J. A. S. in a cypher, which are preserved by Capt. Fontaine, as also a lock of hair and a piece of his pantaloons.

He was rather under the common stature, but his height could not be correctly ascertained. The body was decently interred on Thursday morning, by Capt. Fontaine.

It appears from the foregoing particulars that the unfortunate person is Mr. GRAFF VON PIHL, who from an early period in his life, resided chiefly in this town. For a short time before his death he had been a resident of St. Louis; but on his way to this place had reached Louisville, where it is supposed he put a period to his existence by drowning himself.

BETTER READ THAN TAUGHT.

A Yorkshire clown, a sad unlucky dog,
As e'er put hand to plough, or drain'd a bog,
The parish parson chanc'd one day to meet,
But fail'd to "doff his hat," the priest to greet
Whereat the Churchman looking mighty big,
Addressed him thus, and awful shook his wig:
"An't you a pretty fellow, Sirrah? hey?"
"Yes, zur," cries Hodge, "so all the lasses say."
"Rascal," exclaims the priest, to phrenzy wrought,
"You saucy knave, you're 'better fed than taught,'
"That's true," says Hodge, "as any fool may tell,
"Because you teach me, but I feed myself!"

FROM THE WASHINGTON CITY GAZETTE.

BATTLE OF BLADENSBURG.

On the road to Bladensburg, passing by the spot where Commodore Barney and his corps made so brave a stand against the advancing columns of the British, on the 24th of August, 1814, I saw a flat stone lying on the ground, and supposing it was meant to be used as a monument of that event, I alighted, and went to see if any inscription was on it. To my surprise, I found it was only the 4 mile stone from Washington, upon which I saw written with charcoal, the following lines:—"For fear they should be erased by the weather, I send you a copy of them for insertion that they may be preserved."

Here fought Commodore Barney,
So nobly and gallantly,
Against Britain's sons and slavery,
For a fighting man was he!

There did general Winder flee,
His infantry and cavalry,
(Disgracing the cause of liberty.)
For a writing man was he!

R. McConnell, (WHEEL WRIGHT.)

HAVING made an improvement in the FLAX SPINNING WHEEL, which, by means of Friction Wheels applied to the crank and spindle, reduces the friction to a sixth part of that in the common spinning wheel, is not so liable to get out of repair and the plan is such, that the crank and spindle, he ventures to say, will last fifty years.

He therefore forwards any person or persons from making, selling or using, any wheels or wheels on said plan, without his permission, as he intends applying for a patent right for said plan. Persons possessing a mechanical genius, and the public at large, are respectfully invited to call and examine a wheel on said plan, at his shop on Main Cross-street, where spinning wheels of any description, and any work in his line can be had, on the shortest notice, and at reasonable prices.

Lexington, Sept. 14, 1819—28-3t

We the undersigned do hereby certify, that we have examined the newly improved Flax Spinning Wheel by Robert McConnell, of Lexington; and are of an opinion that it is a valuable machine for spinning flax, and that it will be more lasting than any spinning wheel we have ever seen, as the whole movement is supported on friction wheels. Given under our hands this 14th day of Sept. 1819.

WESTERN HOTEL,

NO. 288, MARKET STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

Sign of Gen. Washington.

THE subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has taken that well known establishment in Market St. next door to the Pittsburgh Mail Stage Office, and lately occupied by Mr. George Yoh. To those who have been accustomed to resort to this house, it is unnecessary to point out its superior advantages. For the information of others, however, he deems it proper to state that its situation is central, high, healthy and convenient to business; an extensive range of backbuildings, consisting of lodging rooms, afford a fine view of the city to the eastward, and admit of a free and uninterrupted circulation of air, and what will give a decided preference in the opinion of many, is the attachment thereto of balconies, so constructed as not only to afford pleasant promenades, but easy means of escape in the event of necessity from any sudden alarm of fire. The great western stages start every morning from the door, and on the premises is one of the best Livery Stables in the city, conducted by Mr. John Tomlinson, where travellers' horses will be faithfully attended to. With these advantages, and some further improvements now making, added to his own unremitting exertions to please, the Subscriber confidently hopes for, and very respectfully solicits, a share public patronage.

R. SMITH,
Printers of the Lexington Gazette, Lexington, Ky; Pittsburgh Gazette, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Western Spy, Cincinnati, Ohio, will please insert this advertisement once a week for three months, and forward their bills for payment to the Office of the "The Union, &c." ### By the President of the United States.

WHEREAS, by an act of Congress, passed on the 3d day of March 1815, entitled, "An act to provide for the ascertaining and surveying of the boundary lines fixed by the treaty with the Creek Indians, and for other purposes," the President of the United States is authorized to cause the lands acquired by the said treaty to be offered for sale, when surveyed.

Therefore, I, James Monroe, President of the United States, do hereby declare and make known that public sales for the disposal agreeably to law, of certain lands in the Alabama territory, shall be held at Cahaba, in the said territory, on the first Monday in December next, and shall continue for three weeks; during which time will be offered for sale, Townships No. 9 to 10, in range 5, 9, 10, 11, 12, in do 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, in do 8 except such lands as have been or shall be reserved by law for the support of schools, or for other purposes. The lands shall be offered for sale in regular numerical order, commencing with the lowest number of section township and range.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, the 24th of August, 1819.

JAMES MONROE,
By the President,
JOSEPH MEIGS, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Printers who are authorized to publish the laws of the United States, will publish the above once a week till the first of December next, and send their bills to the General Land Office for payment.

SPRINGVILLE.

THE SUBSCRIBERS, WILL OFFER THIS TOWN FOR SALE, On the 1st Monday of October next.

THIS town is so planned for health and convenience as to ensure general satisfaction in that respect. It is situated in Owen county, on the bank of the west fork of White River, and immediately opposite the site which has been selected for the seat of justice of Owen. It is 16 miles distant from Bloomington, Ind. the seat of justice of Monroe county, and nearer to it than any other point on the river; and the road between those places being very good, SPRINGVILLE must be principally the place of deposit for that rich, populous and flourishing county. It embraces several fine springs not surpassed by any in the country, and from which (at a trifling expense) water might be conveyed to any extremity of the town. Independent of these advantages, the remarkable healthiness of the place, and the unrivalled fertility of the contiguous country, makes Springville a desirable place either for the purpose of speculation or of obtaining an agreeable residence.

TERMS OF SALE.
One fifth of the purchase money paid at the time of sale, one fifth in 9 months, one fifth in 18 months, one fifth in 27 months and one fifth in three years.
